Dear Josh and Rhona

We're staying in the centre of London for a week. We're having quite a good time. The weather isn't very nice so we go to museums most of the time or we stay in the hotel.

Yesterday it was windy and rainy. Tomorrow we're not going to a museum, we're going to go shopping.

See you both soon.

interested excitement

Andy Roberts was always interested in climbing. When he was a boy he climbed walls, trees, sheds ... everything. But Andy's family lived in London and he didn't climb a mountain until he was twenty. He heard about a special climbing course in Wales. He did the course and he enjoyed it. He was also a very good climber and he got top marks. He loved the excitement of climbing to the top of the mountain. It's a dangerous sport, but Andy is very careful. The views are fantastic when you climb, but a climber can't look at the views! Andy did three more courses and then he went with a team to Mont Blanc in the French Alps and climbed the Eiger, a very difficult part of the mountain. He loved it. After the French Alps, the team went to climb in the Andes, some mountains in South America. Then, they went to Nepal to climb Mount Everest. It was very difficult because the weather was very snowy and foggy. They needed a month to climb to the top, but at the top of the mountain Andy could see forever. He was on top of the world! He then decided that he wanted to climb all the time! 'When I came home from Everest I decided that I wanted to be a full-time climbing teacher. I did a climbing teacher's course and I finished a month ago. Now I'm going to open a climbing school in Wales with some of my friends from the

I did a climbing teacher's course and I finished a month ago. Now I'm going to open a climbing school in Wales with some of my friends from the climbing team. We're going to teach people to climb the mountains in Wales. Of course, in Britain we don't have any high mountains, so we are going to take new climbers to the Alps in France too. I'm going to study French because we want to open an office in the French Alps. We want to do climbing courses in Wales in the winter and then come and do courses in the Alps in the summer. The mountains in Wales are great for people who want to start, but we need an office in the Alps for climbers that want to try more difficult mountains. We think it's going to be fun!'
